DAYLILY (Hemerocallis)

TO OUR CUSTOMERS:

Until 1946, there existed no Hemerocallis organization, but during this year we are pleased to state that "The Midwest Hemerocallis Society has been formed. We are members. This society has issued their first year book and a great deal of confusion has been eliminated from the Hemerocallis field; in that most breeders of Daylilies have "remodeled" the names of some of their introductions, when they had been duplicated by others. The first introducer keeping his named varieties, while their later similar names have been changed.

We find that in Mr. LeMoine Bechtold's Hemerocallis, that we are introducing, there had been like names used on a few of the varieties prior to our listing so you will find these corrected in our list; showing the new name and the old one. For example: Delightful Duet (new name for Delight).

We wish any customer who has purchased Hemerocallis from us and are keeping the varieties labeled, to go over the group and change the name where changes have been made. Then in the future, there will be no duplications or confusions in named varieties.

Thank you,

GILBERT H. WILD & SON.

IRIS

- BROWN THRASHER (Kirkland 1941). After a slow start this iris really came into its own last year. It has gorgeous color, a brilliant golden light brown with lustrous sheen—not velvety.
